

little bulb Pro

"A companion for kids and parents on multiple occasions."

More courage and companionship

At first, I wanted to make a nightlight for my kids. "It's too dark!" "Can you leave the light on?" When little ones start to go to bed independently they always find various reasons to protest. Later, they were given a nightlight and a miracle happened. They began to learn to sleep on their own.

Sometimes kids don't whine deliberately; they need a way to help them adapt better as adults also need companionship and courage.

A little bulb that restores the classic light bulb shape and designed for adults and children. Give it new features in a modern way, suitable for a variety of scenarios, and can accompany you longer.

Learning time on their own: the kid-friendly wall clock

"It's 8 o'clock, time to shower!" "10 more minutes of story time and it's your bed time!" These are some of the daily conversations that happen in our house. Sometimes when they're told to get ready for school by 8 o'clock, and the time approaches, they are not even dressed or they'll say they need to use the bathroom at the last minute. Kids have such trouble understanding the concept of time. How nice it would be to teach my kids to tell time! But teaching this intangible concept is a struggle.

In order to make things easier, I developed this nifty wall clock, little ben. When the prototype arrived, I hung it at home. When my son said, "Mommy, it's 7:15," I was so excited I nearly cried.

I am so happy that he is becoming more independent every day and I have more free time because of that.

Teach the meaning of time

Time is an abstract concept and quite a challenge for kids to learn. Every family has a wall clock, yet most wall clocks on the market aren't designed for kids.

Conventional clocks don't take into consideration kids' height or their cognitive behavior, and design details like the numbers on the dial, color of the clock hands or even the height of installation are often neglected.

What does a kid-friendly clock look like?

After almost a year of thinking, exploring, prototyping and creating, little ben became our answer to this question.

Paper Pulp Wall Clock

"Bigger clock face, easier to read."

Material Consideration

Our daily life is increasingly dependent on plastics, but less than 10% of the world's plastics are effectively recycled. From the perspective of environmental consideration, we thought about whether there is a lightweight and flexible material to replace plastics that could be a long-term companionship?

The answer was "paper", which is light and flexible in form. We used recycled sugarcane pulp as the primary material. After more than a year of continuous trials, the Paper Pulp Wall clock was born.

A Piggy Bank of the Future, Now

How do kids learn about money? Growing up, I used a piggy bank that “ate” my coins. I learned the concept of money as simply as that.

Yet today, there’s less and less cash involved; a piggy bank that takes coins does not come in handy anymore. In an increasingly cashless society, it’s high time to come up with a piggy bank for the next generation.

Enter little can: a piggy bank that does not take physical coins, is full of technology and filled with the same hope and love as the piggy bank from my childhood. It’s the piggy bank of the future, now.

What does little Can do?

ta da Growth Chart

"Tear-resistant, keep track of kids's growth at any time, and take it with you in a roll when you move away."

Home is like your kids, always changing

When I was growing up, my family measured my height by marking it on a door frame. It's lucky that I didn't move around much in my teenage years, yet when I had my own kids, I moved five times in several years. Those old door frame growth charts created a dilemma: to remove them damaged both the wall and the growth chart; to leave it behind would be losing a treasure of sentimental value.

I had often wished for an easily portable growth chart that could move with us and be stored after the children had grown up, and cherished for years to come. My hope is that this will be something meaningful for every family.

Coffee time. Play time. Chill together.

We believe that when designing products, the target market is an element but not the full picture. We anticipate the actual interactions and "togetherness" a family can have to create more happiness. It should be both harmonious and independent.

"For better living, together" is the inspiration for designing the any-way series. Whether you live alone or with pets, have a significant other or have a family with kids, you can always put any-way series in your living room and watch it reveal new possibilities.

Like its name, the any-way coffee table offers endless possibilities of how you can use it and where you can put it. Whether you live by yourself or with a significant other, have kids or are an empty-nester, any-way will be there along every step of the way.

Assorted Color Kid Backpack

"Light and practical companion for travel."

*For kids aged 2.5-7

Backpack for kids

When preparing for the first day of kindergarten, parents will receive a list of necessities—toothbrush, changing clothes, indoor shoes, and they put them in a big bag and take them to the kindergarten. For the kids being first time “to socialize”, giving them a bag means making them a little independent- to decide what to pack, put it in an orderly manner, and then use it by themselves when they need.

To make this symbol of independence a little longer, we have designed kid’s backpacks with a simple and elegant appearance, practical functions and easy-to-care fabrics. It’s a good companion for kids to be out from home.

Organic Tote bag & Shoulder Bag

"A bag that is more friendly to the environment and you"

We assume that fabric bags are more environmentally friendly than plastic bags. However, the truth is that the production process of ordinary fabric bags also consumes a lot of energy and water. Is there a better way to help our planet?

Organic cotton has strict standards and requirements from seeds to production. It can effectively save 91% of irrigation water and reduce 62% of energy use without chemical pesticides. A bag that is friendly to both the environment and us will be used longer and accompany you to love the earth a bit more.

"Illustrations that kids can easily understand."

When I saw illustrated hand washing instructions designed specifically for kids in public restrooms in the United States, I realized that these are rare in China- especially those with cute illustrations. I've only seen these types of instructions in Montessori schools and some hospitals. It inspired me to develop one so that families can have more choices
