

fferrone™

Designer Felicia Ferrone's luxury brand of modern handmade designs delivers the unexpected through a seemingly simple gesture, elevating the everyday. fferrone has been regularly featured in international press, movies/TV productions, and has earned a discerning clientele. The brand and design studio was founded in 2010 in Chicago, however, due to overwhelming global interest, in 2018 she opened her European headquarters in Milan to better serve the European, Middle East, and Asian markets.

Her first design collection, Revolution was designed in 2001 and inducted into the permanent collection of the Art Institute of Chicago in 2009, stands out today as one of fferrone's most iconic glassware designs. Its dual-sided functionality redefined the landscape of the table. Minimalist and original, the collection seems to defy gravity, the result of Ferrone's architectural lens. From there, Ferrone continued to experiment with innovative techniques together with master craftsmen, creating her signature style by inverting tradition with intricate interior detail and unexpected silhouettes.

The design collections range from the Margot for its elaborate richness, the Boyd with its strong shapes which were inspired by Brutalist architecture, to the sophisticated May, and the most recent collection, Frances. Minimalist aesthetics, mastery of proportions, and meticulous attention to detail characterize the fferrone collections of vases, glasses, and accessories perfect for both residential as well as hospitality.

As a graduate of architecture in the United States, Ferrone began her professional career in Milan, working alongside some of the most influential architects and designers of our time, where she learned to “blur the boundaries”. Her work has won numerous awards, international recognition, and published extensively. fferrone was recognized by AD magazine, Maison & Objet 2022: The 20 Brands Designers Should Absolutely Know.

Felicia Ferrone was featured in Woman Made: Great Women Designers published by Phaidon, which is an immersive and timely celebration of 200 women product designers from the early twentieth century to the present day.

Ferrone lives and works in Chicago and in addition to owning fferrone, Felicia is also director of Undergraduate Studies and Clinical Associate Professor of Industrial Design at the University of Illinois in Chicago (UIC). Previously she was the Director of Graduate Studies of Industrial Design at UIC from 2015-2022. Jury member for The Core77 and Archiproducts. She regularly lectures both nationally and internationally about her design practice and design entrepreneurship.
