The bench - nature of transparency

A dialogue between the ancient and the ethereal, this piece is a testament to the silent stories embedded within walnut's grain—each ring a whisper of seasons passed. Resin, like frozen liquid light, flows through the structure, capturing movement in stillness, a seamless bond between the organic and the otherworldly.

The walnut, rich with history, stands firm in its raw elegance. Its deep, earthen textures contrast with the resin's crystalline translucency, a material shaped not by nature's slow hands but by human touch, by intention. Together, they form an equilibrium—weight and levity, shadow and glow, permanence and fluidity.

This is more than furniture; it is a sculptural embodiment of duality. A functional work of art where craftsmanship meets an unspoken rhythm, where solidity dissolves into luminescence. It is the intersection of time and transformation, inviting space to become a canvas for presence, reflection, and wonder.

The whole piece is refraction of reality, an illusion in its finest, showing what is hidden inside out of the known nature creating a new unknown view of design. This piece is reflection of the human creation, of the ordinary that changes between the layers of transparency.

At the intersection of art and functionality, we have come together to redefine furniture design. Our project blends the principles of sculpture with the practicality of everyday furniture, creating pieces that are both artistic and highly functional.

With years of experience working with wood, epoxy resin, and other materials, we have mastered their properties and possibilities. But we are not here to stay within the boundaries of what is already known—we want to take things to the next level. Our goal is to push the limits of material, form, and perception, creating pieces that challenge expectations and engage all the senses.

Our philosophy is rooted in the belief that products should not only be visually striking but also possess distinctive qualities that enhance their usability. We strive to craft designs that are not just complete in form but also entirely unique.

To achieve this uniqueness, we work extensively with epoxy resin, a material that offers endless possibilities for combining colors, textures, and materials. Each piece is meticulously handcrafted—our combined expertise in sculpture, wood-working, and resin artistry ensures the highest level of craftsmanship and quality.
